Moving into the 70's

The sprawling campus and buildings pulse and throb with a steady, strong heartbeat — the occupants circulating up and down, around and through in a never-ending pattern.

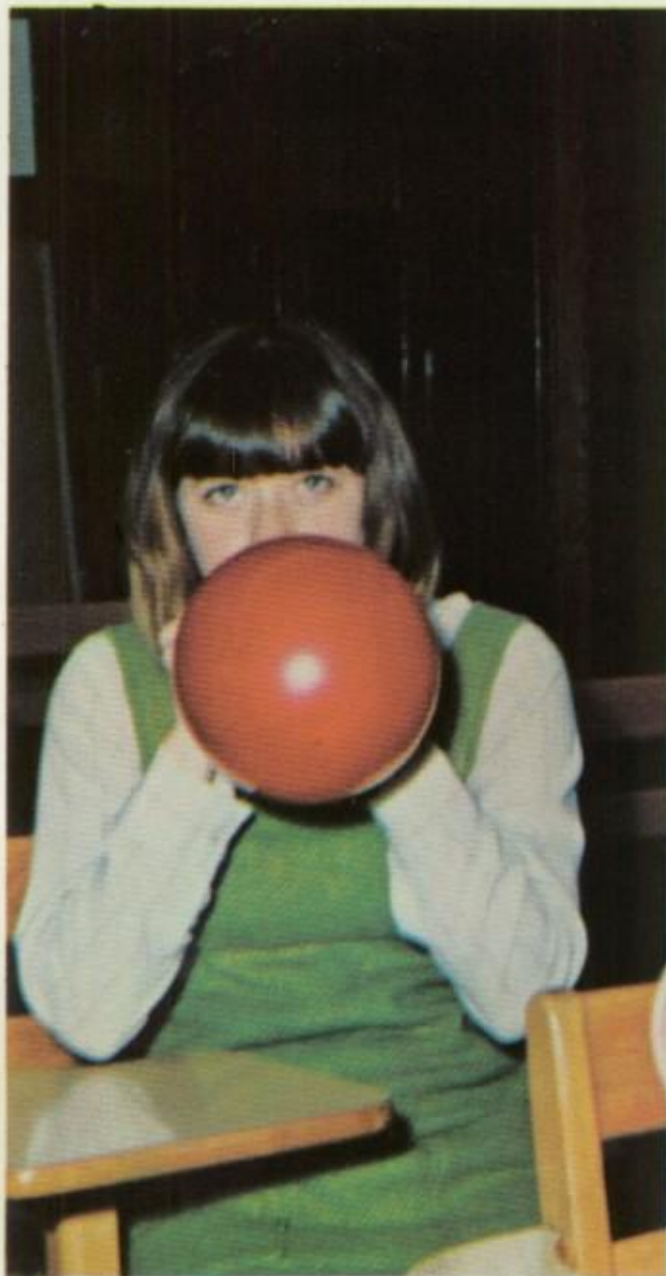

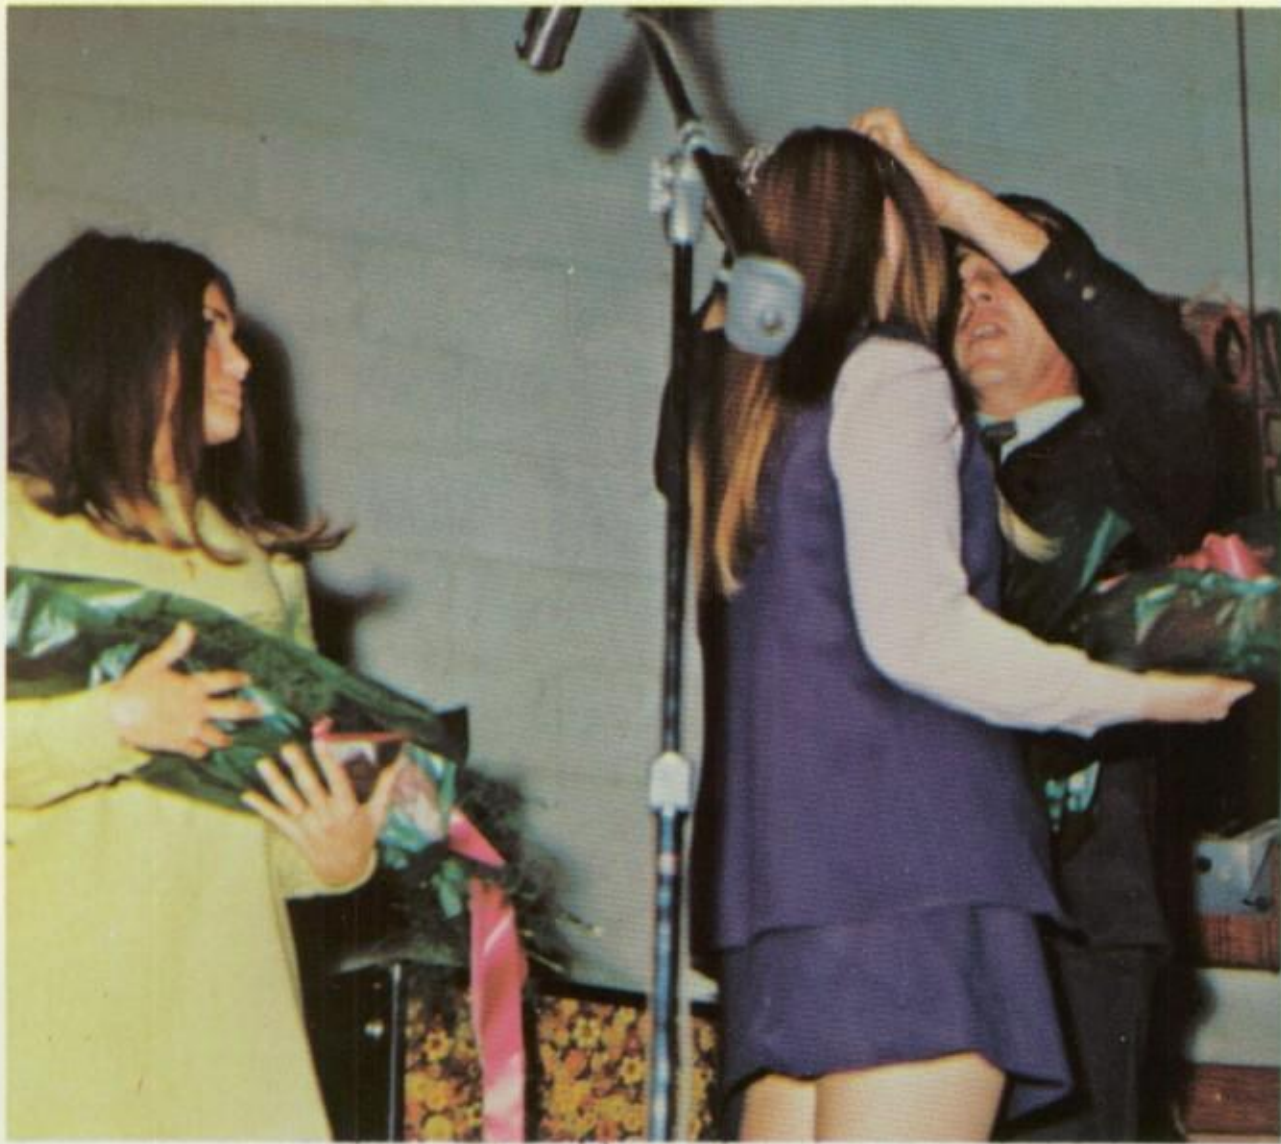

A live and vigorous miniature society teems with the energy and optimism the future demands.

Many classes
give students opportunities for involvement

Balloons, crowns, and smiles come together in November at the Fifth Quarter Dance

Football is a game enjoyed by all — homerooms, Big Reds, Little Reds and spectators.

Wheels
for the would-be Bronsons, sunshine
for sitting with friends,
paint and feathers for the Indian — make pretty pictures on campus

Wherever the action is energetic students are found

Helping hands perform a host of needed tasks

Rest, food, fresh air offer a welcome break in a busy day

The Spirit of the 70's blares and beats across front campus as pep groups gather

Color enlivens the show

In the heat of early September we reluctantly traded our swimsuits and cut-offs for school clothes and slowly made our way back to the big red brick cluster of buildings that would finish our public school education.

We soon learned that the words of our senior motto — moving into the 70's — contained more truth than we had first realized. Teachers incorporated more of the real, cruel world into subject matter and worried more about what we learned than how we looked. Suddenly we began to realize that we would very soon become members of that "establishment" which had fed, warmed, and comforted us for so long. A sense of responsibility grew with the year; the more we relied on self, the more we really learned. As self-reliance grew, so did self-realization.

We found it did not help to cry when we had to repeat our tasks because of others' mistakes. There the job was, and only effort would complete it.

If we move a little more proudly now, it may be the result of changing attitudes that have invited us into the creating and carrying out new ideas and solutions.

Very simply, we have learned that the challenge and the way we meet it are more important than the reward.
